

PIEDMONT COLLEGE

Presents

VANISHING APPALACHIA

KEEPING FAITH ON UNEVEN GROUND

Barbara Brown Taylor
Piedmont College
Butman Professor of Religion

The uneven ground of Appalachia is social and economic as well as geographical. Whether people live in the valleys or on the mountains, they belong to a culture that has developed its own arts, crafts, speech patterns, and ways of standing before God in a region far removed from urban centers. Now many of those ways have become endangered as strip malls, satellite TV, and second home developments eat away at the heart of Appalachia. Join Bill Leonard, Barbara Brown Taylor, and others as they examine the role of religion in this singular American culture, with workshops on everything from shape-note singing to Native American traditions.

Bill J. Leonard
Dean and Professor of Church History
The School of Divinity
Wake Forest University

Friday, February 19th at The Classic Center &
Saturday, February 20th at Piedmont College
Athens, Georgia

Register now!

Call 1-800-868-1641 or go to www.piedmont.edu/RC_form

